An Angry Elephant. A sentinel in the menagerie at Paris has had a curious experience with one of the largest elephants. The sentinel was very conscientious and always requested the spectators not to give the animals anything to eat, which seemed to displease the elephant in question to such an extent that he several times sprinkled the sentry's head with water from his trunk. One day a bystander offered this particular elephant a large The sentinel interfered, as usual, and the elephant promptly dis-charged in his face a violent stream of water. A general laugh ensued, but the sentinel, having calmly wiped his face, stood on one side and continued as watchful as before. Soon after ward he found it necessary to repeat his admonition, but no sooner was this uttered than the elephant laid hold of his musket, twirled it round his trunk, trod it under his feet and did not re-store it until he had twisted it into nearly the form of a corkscrew. Then he gave a snort at the discomfited sentinel, as if to say, "Now I hope you'll mind your own business?"

A Neighing Cook.

Camden says the Thames was one called the Cockney, and therefore a cockney means simply one who lives on the banks of the Thames. Wedg wood says a cockney, or cockerney, is one pampered by city indulgence, in contradistinction to rustics hardened by outdoor work. There is, however, a legend, almost too good to be true namely, that a Londoner who ha never before slept out of sound of Bow Bells had occasion to go into the country and was detained all night He was much disturbed by the lowing of the cattle, the grunting of the pigs and other sounds of country life, which he could not understand, and in particular he was frightened by the crow ing of the cock. In the morning, in response to the farmer's inquiries, he said the sound of the wild beasts had kept him awake. Just at that mo ment the cock crowed again, and the Londoner said: "That's the one! He's been neighing like that for hours! Since then Londoners have been called cockneighs or cockneys.

Contrary to general belief, the py-thon or boa constrictor rarely attacks people and is looked upon very differ ently by the people from the hama-dryad and cobra. The python will take up his abode in a neighborhood and will not disturb anything except the henroosts. These he disturbs very much, as he has a great fondness for chickens; also for a stray dog or small goat. I know of one case, however, in a floating house where a python attacked a woman and, contrary to the preconceived idea, did not crush her in his folds, but attempted to swallow her, commencing with one of her feet. When she was rescued her foot and ankle were badly lacerated by the snake's teeth. The Chinese kill the python to make medicine from the liver, which has a high repute among them. They also use the dried skip for medicine. Any Chinese drug shor in Slam will have a number of pythol skins for sale.—Medical Journal.

Woman the Tougher Sex. Although men, as they run, are perhaps muscularly stronger than women their inability to withstand the ele nents and their reliance upon clothes place them considerably below the so called weaker sex in the matter of un clothed toughness. Women wear clothes for ornament. Men use them as protective covering. A group of men macolds and rheumatism. The health of women similarly placed would suffer little from the enforced exposure. The fact appears to be, therefore, that in everything but muscle-in vitality, rug-gedness, character, disposition, brain power, etc.-woman is the tougher, not the weaker, sex.-Kansas City Journal SCHWAB DROPS HUND REDS. About 375 men were discharged from he Bethlehem Pa., Steel Work last week

Charles M. Schwab, who recently spent a day in the mills incognito. The pud-dle mill and gray mill were closed down and work on the building of gigantic new blast furnaces was stopped. Since Mr. schwab has begun to release his force between 600 and 700 have been dismissed. Mr. and Mrs. Schwab, after visiting he mansion of Mrs. R. P. Linderman signed a lease for one year, and will take up their residence there on October 1. Mrs. Linderman is the widw of a late president of the Bethleham Steel Company.

A Traveling Man's Experience, A Traveling Man's Experience.

'I must tell you my experience on an east bound O. R. & N. R. B. train from Pendleton to Le Grande, Ore., writes Sam A. Garber, a well known traveling man. 'I was in the smoking department with some other traveling men when one of them went out into the coach and came back and said, 'There is a woman sick unto death in the car.' I at once got up and went out, found her very ill with cramp colic; her hands and arms were drawn up so you could and arms were drawn up so you could not straighten them, and with a death-like look on her face. Two or three like look on her face. Two or three ladies were working with her and giving her whisky. I went to my suit case and got my bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarroea Remedy (I never travel without it), ran to the water tank, put a double dose of the medicine in the glass, poured some water into it and stirred it with a pencil; then I had quite a time to get the lathen I had quite a time to get the la-dies to let me give it to her, but I suc-ceeded. I could at once see the effect and I worked with her, rubbing her Our stock is replete with all kinds of wines, liquors, cordials, etc. Our wine list is were almost into Le Grande, where I were almost into Le Grande, where I worthy of inspection, being composed of the best imported wines for table purposes, a medium grade of imported goods used principally for cooking and a regular grade of cooking domestic wines.
